

Dear Representative,

The Interventional Cardiology Complications Conference (RP2612D) will be held on Saturday, December 5, 2026. This continuing education activity will take place in-person at the UT Southwestern Medical Center McDermott Lecture Hall (D1.502), 5323 Harry Hines Blvd, in Dallas, Texas and is sponsored by UT Southwestern Department of Internal Medicine, Division of Cardiology, and the UT Southwestern Office of Continuing Education.

Description and Target Audience

The Interventional Cardiology Complications Conference will focus on strategies for the prevention, early identification, and management of complications related to cardiac procedures. Designed for cardiology and interventional cardiology professionals, including physicians, advanced practice providers, nurses, and cardiac catheterization laboratory staff, the program provides an engaging, face-to-face learning experience. Educational formats will include case-based discussions, focused didactic presentations, interactive panel discussions with audience participation, and hands-on activities that reinforce best practices and promote team-based strategies to enhance patient safety and clinical outcomes

Learning Objectives include:

- Identify potential complications associated with cardiology and interventional cardiology procedures.
- Describe steps to recognize and prevent procedural complications whenever possible.
- Apply appropriate management strategies for complications arising during or after cardiac procedures.
- Discuss the psychosocial impact of procedural complications on physicians and healthcare teams and identify strategies to support well-being.
- Encourage a nonjudgmental culture that promotes open discussion of complications and continuous learning
